PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

THOMAS COGLIN

As President of the graduating class, it is my honor and privilege to welcome you, our friends, teachers, and parents to the last meeting of the class of 1959.

Three years ago we met for the first time, two hundred and forty-nine of us, each a little scared, a little lonely, and very much bewildered. The bright classrooms and the well-equipped cafeteria of Chandler, the fine library at Grafton, the gymnasium at Providence, and the beautiful auditorium at Burncoat had all been left behind us. Gone too were our positions of leadership in junior high school. But three years of study, of fun, and of companionship have welded us together. We are now a part of Classical. Its walls may crumble, its dim lights shadow the rooms, but its spirit will always live in us.

To the guidance, the encouragement, and the patience of our parents and of the faculty, we owe our success both as a class and as individuals. Mr. Couming, in particular, as assistant principal and as principal of Classical High School, has endeared himself to all of us and placed many of us forever in his debt.

In this our last meeting at Classical we wish to live again some of the memorable events of our life here together. We hope that in sharing them with you we shall demonstrate some of the things Classical has meant to us, the one hundred and seventy-five who survived, the class of 1959.

CLASS HISTORY

HELENA A. TISDELL

The month was September, the year was 1956, we were the people, and we were bewildered. We were gathered here in the assembly hall of Classical High as exiles from a common, cherished homeland, the great and wonderful institution called junior high. In our foreign-looking clothes—how did we know what to wear to a high school?—we made a pathetic sight, hardly the fine impression which we had hoped to create. With instructions for becoming full-fledged citizens of this land of opportunity, each of us received a large stack of books. Because, perhaps, of our difficulty with the new language—"dig," "get hep," etc.—some of us got lost during those early weeks. It did not, however, take long for us to learn enough to recognize an "I Am a Senior" sign when we saw one.

In November, we became acquainted with the Argus. We wondered whether Classical was becoming just another country-club school: they published our telephone numbers. How disappointed were we to discover that this move was, and I quote, "to facilitate the successful completion of home assignments." Oh, well.

That same winter brought the Variety Show. Who can forget the antics of "Elvis" Butler and Baba. In that Variety Show, Roberta Hack, straight from the glamorous stages of the Wild West, yodeled her way through a delightful cowboy song. As January drew to a close, we heard of a Junior Prom—some lucky ones attended—and we heard Seniors wailing about something like College Boards. Why, we wondered, were they so upset? What were these "boards," anyway? Now we wish that we had never found out.

In February, our half-brothers and sisters joined us in exile as sophomores. Gleeefully, to our poor relatives, we sold elevator passes and swimming pool tickets; we were obviously making great advances in this new land of ours. Certainly we would be well-known the next year, for before June, Sue Brown, Sandy Dorsey, Marie Mortimer, and Fran Munton were chosen to brighten the cheerleaders' squad. Al Garsys was named to play for the varsity basketball team, partly to give the new cheerleaders something to yell about and partly to add a spot of color to the team. Another little highlight of our sophomore year was Moldy Day, for which Pete Consiglio produced just about the dirtiest sweatshirt in the school.

As we neared the end of our first year of probation, those of us who attended the Senior Play and Prom, Class Day and Graduation wondered whether we should ever be seniors—they had so much fun. When school closed in June, taking stock, we discovered that, with the exception of mass migrations to Commerce at mid-year, we had survived—this far, at least.

Fully rested from summer activities, we returned in September of 1957 to find that three new immigrants had joined our ranks, Mardi Moran and Dotty Cunningham from Notre Dame and Paula Dupré from Holy Name of Jesus High. To balance the scale, we sentenced Bart Roggensack to further exile in California and the Coghlin twins to Worcester Academy. Tommy, after spending a few days at the Academy, soon proved himself the wiser twin. Al Israel enjoyed a brief football career and a longer period as an interesting casualty. If we remember correctly, Dotty Hargrove and Janice Ratté sported black eyes in 1957. And they seemed to be such good friends—at least they agreed to use field hockey practice as their excuse.

Since we were members of a class with such varied talents, we needed capable leaders to coordinate our efforts. As officers of our junior class, we elected Dick Callahan, president; Sue Brown, vice-president; Fran Munton, secretary; and John Lehigh, treasurer. In the Variety Show, "Around the World," Phil and Stuart Rosenberg, 1959's gift to Broadway, were billed as going was getting rough, for Cookie Cohen gave up and moved to Hull. As members of the girls' basketball team, Gail Nielsen and Gail Wilson began to rival Mickey Mantle in the consumption of oranges—they knew that you cannot store vitamin C. On one lovely winter evening, at the Hillcrest Country Club, we held our Junior Prom, "Stairway to the Stars." Queen Bette Broberg ruled—King Ted was so proud—surrounded by the beautiful Princesses Marianne, Joy, Elenora, Frannie, and Sandy K.

After a surprise vacation of two days caused by March snowstorms, we wore raccoon coats and sack dresses, attacked our studies with our usual apathy and hoped for the best. On the scholastic side of the ledger—and we did keep one—Michael Feer won a high award in the Science Fair. In May Arabel Barrett, Octavius Barrett, the flirty Bella Hadley, Robert Brown-ing, and Captain Surtees Cook lived again. Responsible for this reincarnation were Susan Brown, Joel Cohen, Sandy Krentzman, Philip Rosenberg, and Stuart Rosenberg respectively, as any good geometry teacher would say. Jim Aleckshun, Bucko Scanlon, and Jim Kelleher helped to preserve our athletic reputation by keeping it almost free from—victory, of course. Laurie Mulry and Jay Johnson decided to do something about this situation and joined the cheerleaders.

After finding that a convertible is not a guaranteed mode of transportation to Junior Picnics, we enjoyed Whalom pizzas and digested them on Whalom roller-coasters. Storie Batstone and Nish Tesholan, by nature timid souls, preferred fiery steeds on the merry-go-round. As our second year on foreign soil neared its end, we found that we had become really attached to this place; we eagerly anticipated the joys of being seniors. Besides hearing that we had only a year before being real citizens, we lent our ears to other rumors. We heard that Mr. Fenner, Mr. Hearn, and Mr. Rice would retire at the end of the school year. We heard, but we could not believe, that there might be an honest-to-goodness library here in the fall.

In September of 1958, we entered these halls as the honored, venerable, wise, and book-laden seniors. Mr. Couming was appointed principal; Mr. Cravedi became chief passer-out of P.M.'s. In time Room 1 became an aquatinted library and the office blushed rose pink. To lead us during this final probationary period, we chose Tom Coghlin as president and Marie Mortimer as secretary. Sue Brown and John Lehigh retained their office. Apparently those in Room 4, we were able to import Lin Moulton from Nebraska, where Lano's would be called a café. Another new addition to our class at the same time was Tom Sneery, that handsome, talented, intelligent, and modest sportswriter. Speaking of sports, our football team, led by a certain Mr. Manasas, unfortunately, met with little success.

To display the talents of the class of 1959 to the general public, Art Dufault, Carol Ann Zinkus, and Nancy Fitch appeared on the stage at Branzo's. The rest of us toiled to make our Variety Show the tremendous success which it was. Responsible for this success were Stuart "Shut-up" Rosenberg, Philip "Get-back-here-and-do-it-again" Rosenberg, Sandy "Kick-high, girls" Krentzman, and Carol "You're-flat-again" Clifford. To offset our misfortunes in football, the basketball team, with the combined efforts of Pete Brem, Vid Matusaitis, and captain Al Garsys, made a fine showing to add glory and Salutubie spirit to our senior year.

Nick Gage made his television debut by being our representative to Student Government Day in Boston. Thinking that he, too, might win T.V. fame, Joel M. Cohen made the trip to Boston, but the best he could do was to get his picture into the Evening Gazette.

While he was in Boston one day Nish Tesholan managed in his spare time to accept an award from the Jewish War Veteran's group. On the lighter side, we can never forget the gaiety at the Yellow Barn when "Tiger Hopscotch" was held there. Our records show that it was on that festive and formal occasion that Sandy Dorsey made her graceful entrance into high society. She fell up the steps.

At the Senior Play, "The Matter with Mildred" we were amused to discover the peculiar psycho-analytic skill of John Renard. Needless to say, we never realized that Lin Moulton, as her "other self," Wendy Collins, had powers of hypnosis.

We have spent these three years becoming important citizens of Classical High, and now we must surrender our posts. We have enjoyed good times, we have burned midnight oil, we have shared disappointments. Remaining now are only the final touches. Joyfully we anticipate the fun of the prom. Proudly we await the solemnity of graduation. As we leave Class Day today, let us say, "God bless us,"—for as He knows, we need it.

CLASS WILL - 1959

JOEL M. COHEN

BE IT REMEMBERED that We, the Class of 1959 of Classical High School of Worcester in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, being of sound mind and memory, but knowing the uncertainty of this life, especially with all this hay-fever, do make this our LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT, hereby revoking all former wills and I.O.U.'s by us at any time heretofore made.

We, who have spent 934,200 happy periods in Classical, leave our Alma Mater to suffer throughout eternity with only our love and devotion, but without our guidance.

The following bequests we make to our several teachers:

To Mr. Couming, Mr. Cravedi, and the entire faculty, we leave our most sincere gratitude for their help and leadership for the past three years.

To Mr. Powers, we leave a one year's supply of school implements: one evenly worn eraser, 52 pieces of paper, and one half-sharpened pencil.

To Miss Kennedy, we leave twenty-five pounds of chalkdust, so she can always have someone to clap the erasers.

To Mr. McKinley, we leave 1,407,863 pansy seeds and two shovelfull of dirt to start his own garden.

To Mr. McHugh, Ann Salmon leaves her formula for mixing sodium hydroxide and hydrochloric acid and becoming the first person to get sulfur.

We leave one worn-out copy of "The Count of Monte-Cristo," and "you can take it . . . Mr. Johnstone."

To Miss Shaughnessy, a nameless Classicalite leaves a stack of "Tom Sneery" columns.

To Miss Phillips, we leave a window stick for each window in her room.

To Mr. Butler, we leave a leash strong enough for Bobo to take Mr. Butler for a walk every morning.

To Mr. Marden, we leave a new all-purpose room heater, so he will never more have to swing on the chain.

To Mr. Coakley's next senior driving class, we leave a speedometer which doesn't go over 20.

In addition to the aforementioned gifts, which the class has made to the faculty, I have been requested to make mention of the following personal bequests:

We leave all the sophomores and juniors . . . behind.

Neal Baron leaves one worn-out tennis racquet.

Kenny Miller leaves our great basketball team to next year's manager.

Eddie Davidson and Steve Krintzman leave their complimentary passes to the basketball games to Harvey Boss and Al Tapper.

Russ Person leaves Miss Gilbert, right Russell?

CLASS WILL (Continued)

Dickie Harris, Pete Brem, and Vid Matusaitis leave their basketball wizardry to Coach Brennan to use as he sees fit

Henry Edinburg leaves his autographed copy of his latest best-seller, "Losing Friends for Fun and Profit."

John Lehugh leaves his popularity to brother Dwayne.

Norman Robinson leaves Robert Burns forever

Richie Kashnow leaves his ability as an orator to some highly unsuspecting junior

Jack Renard leaves a few extra inches to some needy junior

Paul Cohen leaves still singing "Tall Paul."

Tommy Coghlin leaves running-for another office.

Nick Gage leaves his collection of "Pictures of People I Admire," over two hundred autographed pictures—guess who?

John Kuppenheimer would leave his electronic brain to science, but, unfortunately, it's attached to him.

Al Garsys leaves dribbling.

Helena Tisdell leaves her shoes to any junior girl with enough poise, good looks, and intelligence to fill them.

Pete Goyette leaves his mongrel car to posterity.

Janie Deitz leaves silently, for a change.

Nish Teshoran and Stu Batstone leave their ability as cheerleaders to some brave juniors.

Carol Ann Zinkus, leaves her versatility to any junior girl . . . who happens to play the piano, bass violin, dance, and maintain honor marks

Phil and Stu Rosenberg leave the teachers still unable to tell them apart

Jimmy Tontono leaves Mr. Powers, after five terms.

Alan Israel leaves one chess set.

Joel Reck leaves a certain junior girl blue.

Carol Clifford leaves the job of directing the variety show's musical chorus to some talented incoming senior.

Diana Dallas leaves the job of returning everybody's overdue library books to fellow library worker, Jeff Burack.

Sandy Dorsey leaves for the wide open spaces.

The Lithuanian Dancers leave wonderful memories of two variety shows.

Judy Rosenberg leaves her friendly "Good Morning" and cheery disposition to some sour junior.

Mark Widoff leaves arguing . . . I mean "debating."

Don Leombruno leaves a bottle of trumpet oil to any deserving member of the junior class who either plays the trumpet or drinks oil.

Sue Brown leaves singing, "You're a clown, Charley Brown."

Alan Savat leaves an autographed copy of his latest book, "Successful Excuses for Overtime Parking."

Karen Sue Cotzin leaves her secret for getting into college—a skeleton key.

We all leave Classical with a lump in our throats.

To this last will and testament of the Class of 1952, I set my hand and seal this seventeenth day of June, nineteen hundred and fifty-nine.

Signed,

CLASS ORATION

RICHARD KASHNOW '59

Within some twenty or twenty-five years, we who are soon to be graduated from Classical High School will assume positions of responsibility beside thousands of other graduates, some as leaders of our country—of the world. Such prospect appears to frighten most adults. I sincerely believe they entertain needless anxieties and fears; their picture of tomorrow's world in our hands is greatly distorted.

I think I reflect sentiments common to my classmates; our convictions are closely knit; our outlook is very much alike. I am anticipating an exciting tomorrow. The disappointments and sorrows which I cannot foresee, but expect all the same, do not significantly darken the picture for me, for I have confidence in my own potentialities and in those of my fellow graduates.

Perhaps every new generation is regarded dubiously by its elders, but ours has been subjected to particularly severe condemnation. But on what evidence have we been judged? Our taste in dancing, music, and wearing apparel has been interpreted as being representative of our character; we are considered foolish, irresponsible, even delinquent. But let our judges keep in mind the fads of their youth and remember that despite them they have matured into responsibility. Our future can, nay will, be just as bright.

Despite this show of confidence, however, I am not totally unfamiliar with fear. In the past few years, I have been exposed to so much information: scientific theories, mathematical formulae, novels, plays, and poetry; little wonder that I—and I am not alone—am often confused. This confusion sometimes leads to misgivings, or little fears, about my ability to absorb this learning. Furthermore, high school studies are necessarily largely abstract, nor are they complete without some continuance in each. These are my fears—and small they are. And these worries will be short-lived, for the next few years in college will probably dissipate them.

We can discard these, furthermore, as insignificant since they do not represent the major concern of our parents or of adults, in general. A mysterious fear of the future lurks deep in the cells of their minds, as a ghost in the secluded corners of a room. Not so in the thoughts of youths. Who fears that nuclear war will devastate our country, our planet? Who would hesitate to cross the threshold of space and swiftly reach new dimensions? Who challenges the safety of the all-encompassing sweep of technology across the face of our world? Not I! Not my fellow graduates! Not the youth of this country, but our elders, our parents. The veterans of the World Wars, the veterans of life's horrors and tragedies; those who have experienced disaster, tragic loss, sweeping changes—these are the people who fear the future. And perhaps their fears are justified.

And who am I to declare myself so bold, so fearless, of those things which my elders do fear? They know enough to fear. I do not. These frightening prospects are about as frightening to me as to a newborn baby, who knows not of the evils of men and cannot fear those things which he does not know. How brave or bold should I be, however, were I confronted with these situations in the immediate future? Perhaps I could not face real danger. I have been told that one of the most pleasurable experiences is that of observing danger from a position of safety. Time is my protector—the dividing factor which places me rows away from the boxing match in the ring, decks above the charging bull in the arena, feet below the daring acrobat on the swing. I consider the horrors of nuclear warfare, the dangers of space travel, and laugh and boast in the face of danger—but not my danger, not just yet. My bravery is sheer bravado, but still not worthless. For with—out youth's rashness, adventurous spirit, and tendency to scoff at danger, how could the world make progress? This variance of fear, this uneven distribution in youth and in adults is a controller of equilibrium. Even as it allows the young to move mountains and deter the course of swift rivers, so does it compensate in elders for their comparative lack of action,

their satisfaction with less adventure.
From a mathematical viewpoint, fear is in indirect proportion to age.

Most adults seek stability in life, security in their positions and home life. Happiness is closely related to content, to satisfaction. Carlyle saw "the only true Happiness of a man in clear decided Activity in the sphere for which, by nature and circumstances, he has been fitted and appointed." This is the happiness of an adult. Far be it from the desires of adventuring, restless youth.

Before youth completes that miraculous transformation into adulthood, before he assumes his position of responsibility in that future world about which the fears of our adults revolve, he will have lost some of the boldness, the rashness, the daring which is misinterpreted as irresponsibility.
Let, then, the worry-laden minds and hearts of our adults be relieved of their apprehensions. Let optimism and bright confidence reign when they consider the world of tomorrow in our hands.

"IT'S SMART to line up job interviews well in advance of graduation. And one of the best places I know to contact is the Telephone Company. Several of us from my graduating class are working here — and every one of us loves it."

Telephone jobs are important ones. We have our own training program which you can enter without any previous job experience. The pay is good, and you'll get regular raises.

Why not come and see our employment interviewer soon . . . before you graduate. Ask the Guidance Counselor at your school to tell you when and where to apply.
